1. The Yugoslav Army called up a large number of reserves in Maribor [REDACTED] and instructed them to report the following morning at the Zanker (sic, possibly Zanker?) school in Maribor. Those who reported on 3 July were immediately shipped to an unknown destination. Yugoslav military authorities have reportedly declared that the Yugoslav Army would be increased to a strength of 1,800,000 men.
 2. The military guard at the main Maribor railroad station and all railroad bridges has been doubled since the last week in June 1950. Guards are carefully checking all persons using these installations.
 3. There have been no indications of the drafting of new classes or of significant troop movements in the Slovene area. Normal activities continue at the Air Force Officers rest center, Wildhaus Palace, near Maribor.
 4. The construction of a strategically important railroad bridge between Maribor and Zidani Most was completed on 1 July 1950.
